EXCITEMENT IN SCHOOLS.

One of those sudden waves of hysteria which from time to time sweep the crowded tenements of the East Side, in New York, temporarily closed three public schools with an attendance of more than 4,000 pupils yesterday, blocked all traffic on Grand street for an hour, and was not quieted until the reserves were called out. Beyond the fact that many parents have of late been receiving threatening letters demanding $1 from each family, on pain of having their children murdered, there is no explanation.

First a gust of wind carried the uneasy tattoo of a fire engine on the gallop to the pent-up children of a school that houses 2,300 pupils; the engine whistled shrilly, a little girl screamed in answer, and in a minute the hallways were filled with a mob of shrieking, fighting boys and girls and panic-stricken mothers from nearby tenements were clawing and kicking at the outside of the street doors.

As if by prearrangement, another passing engine chafed the nerves of another set of children in a second school. The rumor spread through the excited, surging streets that the school was on fire. Before the crowds could get to it, there was a shout that a third school had been blown up by the Black Hand.

Then there was no holding the people. Parents fought with the police for their children, and many were torn and bruised in the scuffle. All traffic came to a stop, and it was long before order was restored.

All the East Side schools had to be closed an hour earlier than usual. It was found impossible to get more than half the normal attendance, and those that did return could not study.

SKULL FRACTURED.

With her skull fractured and 40 stab wounds in her body, Mrs. Kate Spereza and her 7-year-old daughter, also badly injured, were found dying in their home at Coldale, Pa., yesterday. Not far away lay an infant, spattered with blood from the mother and sister, but not injured. Mrs. Spereza keeps a boarding house, all of her 10 boarders working in the coal mines. The daughter was stabbed a dozen times and her skull is fractured.
